Welcome home! This 1888 home has rich memories and ready to make new ones...Believe it or not the large tree/bush is a Sweet Bay Laurel!

There is something to be said of style and character.....

Let's step inside.....to my left is the vintage door going directly to the kitchen for ease of use.

Entering the home with the Sapphire and ruby stained glass door, the staircase is behind this wall....

With the entry to my right, the feature that is unique to Victorians are the bay windows that are on each floor above one another to give that nice effect and architecture.

This propane stove is the heat source for the home. The Vintage grates between rooms and in the floor above moves the heat around the home.

Another look at the living room space and entry.

I took this picture because the next shot is when there was a sitting area here, to see how inviting and comfortable the home is....

Sweet

Though a middle class home, it has these wonderful touches of elegance

The plaster medallion was saved.....

The formal dining area and to the right is the parlor.....

Spacious room.....it is great having the expansive windows to let nature fill the space.

Just a look back from the dining area.

The Parlor..love the vintage paper....

This is the interior look at the kitchen door. The question is, is the stained glass of a flower or Queen?

Plenty of room for a breakfast table....by the way, the table and pot you see stays. They had no more room!!!

The pipe is from the huge propane cookstove they removed. Piping still there....If you look closely to the left you will see the oven plug in. Never used.

From the sink, center photo, the left door is to the claw foot tub 3/4 bath and to the right the access to the backyard and utility, which you can see. Isn't this precious?

Now, let's go upstairs.....

First room, left, top of stairs. This was, at one time, fitted for a kitchenette. There is a freezer up there that stays. There are also materials for the home that stay.

The 3/4 bath is at the top of the stairs.....

To the right of the bath is the 2nd bedroom, cabinets stay.

And to the right of the 2nd bedroom is the Master Suite. Again, there is the Bay window to let the morning sun stream in....There was a propane stove up here and the piping is still there. Such delightful touches and not just boiler plate.

Now a look across from where the stove pipe was and looking across. You can see the bath door open.

There is a small partial view.....

You can actually see the moonlight dance across the Bay

Let's take a walk out to the back yard. This is a huge glorious Oak Tree facing you!

You can see the previous owner sitting at her desk in the Parlor. As a writer, this space is so rich with energy.

Apple and cherry trees, roses and the afternoon sun dances all over this yard. Fencing to keep our inquisitive deer out and the love in.

We want you to know that this home has been loved and waiting for a new love.
